She called him her “Angel in the Ambulance.” She was a young woman in her mid-twenties, innocently driving to work. The truck struck her broadside. The motor vehicle crash in the middle of a severe thunderstorm had been devastating. She and the other driver both had suffered injuries and were loaded into the only available ambulance - not a common situation. With loud cracks of thunder, the other patient restless and vomiting, the air conditioning in the ambulance not working, and then a major highway closed, anybody would have been disconcerted! But this wonderful saint recognized a provision of the Lord. The chaplain, who was also an EMT, rode with her in the ambulance, providing medical care as well as prayer and comfort. A bad situation was made more bearable by the presence of a chaplain, representing the very presence of God, looking after His children. When the chaplain visited her church a week later, the patient stood to thank God for her “Angel in the Ambulance!”
